High Court Won't Re-Evaluate Green Sturgeon Habitat Ruling

The U.S. Supreme Court on Tuesday said that it won't hear an appeal of a Ninth Circuit ruling that upheld the designation of 8.6 million acres in California, Oregon and Washington as critical habitat for the threatened green sturgeon.

BLM Not Bound To Rein In Wild Horse Herds, 10th Circ. Says

The Bureau of Land Management had no automatic duty to trim wild horse populations in Wyoming once they reached a certain threshold, the Tenth Circuit ruled in a published opinion on Tuesday, striking down the state's bid to revive a lawsuit against the agency.

Wash., Timber Co. Reach $60M Deal In Oso Landslide Suit

The state of Washington and a timber company have agreed to settle a liability suit brought by victims and family members of those who died in the 2014 Oso landslide for a total of $60 million, according to court documents filed in Washington state Superior Court.

Marathon Petroleum Says BP Owes It For Texas Refinery Fixes

Marathon Petroleum Company LP filed a suit in federal court in Texas on Tuesday against BP products North America, alleging that BP's refinery and other properties were out of compliance with laws and that under an agreement governing Marathon's 2013 purchase, BP is responsible for the costs of bringing the properties up to code.

9th Circ. Stays Firm On Cross-Border Pollution Ruling

The Ninth Circuit said Tuesday it would not budge on its decision to reverse a ruling that had allowed the state of Washington and a confederated tribal nation to sue a Canadian mining company over aerial emissions from a British Columbia smelter.

Gov't Presses Porsche Tampering Claim In Emissions Suit

The government told a California federal judge Friday that Porsche can't shake a tampering claim in litigation over Volkswagen's emissions cheating scandal, contending that a concurrently filed amended complaint moots the request and the allegation is sufficiently pled regardless.

VW Looks To Bring Vermont Emissions Case To Calif. MDL

Volkswagen has removed a lawsuit by the Vermont attorney general over the automaker's diesel emissions scandal to Vermont federal court, seeking to send the case to the multidistrict litigation in California established to oversee the hundreds of lawsuits against the company relating to the scheme.

Why GCs Still Care About Law Firm Name Recognition

In metrics-driven, bottom line-focused law departments, do prestige and reputation still matter in outside counsel selection as much as results and cost? Experts say they always will — but only in certain situations.

3 UK Firms Will Merge To Create World's 6th Largest Law Firm

There's a new U.K. heavyweight on the global law firm block as the partners of CMS UK, Nabarro LLP and Olswang LLP have voted "overwhelmingly" to merge, a tie up that creates the sixth largest law firm in the world by headcount.

Norton Rose's New US Managing Partner Eyes Expansion

Norton Rose Fulbright has elected Daryl L. Lansdale Jr. to serve as its new U.S. managing partner, the firm announced Tuesday. The new leader says he plans to focus the firm's growth on four key industry sectors: energy, financial institutions, health care and technology.

ABA Bias Rule Push Begins Amid Signs of Resistance

With the American Bar Association's effort to propagate a controversial bias misconduct rule underway, evidence is already surfacing that the rule will hit plenty of roadblocks on its way to state passage, experts say, further diverging the model rules from local codes.

9th Circ. Ruling Limiting Judges' Political Dealings Stands

Opponents of restrictions on judges' political speech were dealt a blow Tuesday when the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review the appeal of a Ninth Circuit decision that upheld Arizona's rules barring judges from endorsing or campaigning for political candidates.

Rainmaker Q&A: Dentons' Rodney Boyd

You have to develop an ever-evolving, deepening series of relationships even though you may not have a client who needs to access those relationships today. If you're going to be a rainmaker, you have to build a network of relationships that are substantive and leverageable even before you need them, says Rodney Boyd, partner at Dentons.

Rainmaker Q&A: Schulte Roth's Brian Pfeiffer

All of us have lives outside of work that we want to get home to. But regardless of whether you are a junior associate, a senior associate or a partner, if you're working on a matter with a client and you haven't met them for dinner or a drink, it's a significant missed opportunity, says Brian Pfeiffer, a partner at Schulte Roth & Zabel LLP.
